Gradoli, Lazio

Gianmarco Antonuzzi and Clémentine Bouveron tend around 14 hectares of land, with vineyards amongst olive groves, chestnut trees, shrubs and oaks. Sit around Lago di Bolsena near Gianmarco's childhood town of Gradoli in Lazio's north, the soils are volcanic and rich in iron and minerals.

Vines are planted at a density of up to 10,000 plants per hectare, comprising a mix of massale selections and ungrafted vines. Everything is done by hand, with careful attention to the needs of each plant and while biodynamic principles are employed, the approach here goes above and beyond.

Each year they produce a dizzying number of different wines which are vinified in an ancient cellar in the village's centre where nothing is added at any stage. To taste here is a real treat, Gianmarco is a master of élevage and a real patience in this respect results in some of the purest, most delicious wines we have tried.

This is a fascinating project, where the passion and dedication of two people is single handedly putting one of Italy's lesser known villages firmly on the map.

BIANCO R
2020

Procanico from old vines trained in albarello and planted at a high density in their 'La Chiesa' vineyard. The grapes were destemmed and fermented on the skins for three weeks, before twenty months of rest in old casks. A brilliant shade of gold, it is compact and elegant with complex notes of smoke and exotic spice, and real power and poise.
